

Mike Burgess is Assistant Director of Workforce Strategy and Developments based at the Northwest NHS in Manchester. Key elements of his role include developing and delivering an integrated Northwest health and social care workforce strategic framework and workforce tools to support the production of “employer led” workforce plans, workforce development and effective commissioning of education.

The past 5 years in the NHS has seen Mike work as an organisational development manager, workforce analyst and workforce performance manager. Prior to the NHS he worked as an IT development manager developing bespoke IT applications.

Mike’s key interest is strategic workforce planning based on skills and competencies around patient needs and has underpinned this with post-graduate theory at Thames Valley University / National Workforce Projects.
